"Father" is a verb, and fathering is the highest calling of God on men. Man Maker Project is a guide for fathers to intentionally usher their sons into godly manhood. Now more than ever, the reality of unfinished men confronts us at every turn. Without intentional fathering, a boy's core question--Am I a man?--forever echoes in his soul. Every boy needs to hear his father's clear "yes" in response. While many fathers know they should do something for their maturing sons, they have little idea how to create such an initiatory process. Man Maker Project offers a practical roadmap that equips fathers to create a unique, modern-day masculine initiation experience for their sons. Rather than a single event or ceremony, fathers can guide their boys through a yearlong process, with the support of a cadre of hand-selected men. This book also challenges fathers to investigate their own stories, as God's mutually redemptive design is for us to be fathered ourselves as we father our sons. Through this modern-day rites of passage process, fathers fulfill their calling, sons find their footing, and society receives solid men ready to strongly and kindly restore the world.

The emergence of symbolic culture is generally linked with the development of the hunter-gatherer adaptation based on a sexual division of labor. This original and ingenious book presents a new theory of how this symbolic domain originated. Integrating perspectives of evolutionary biology and social anthropology within a Marxist framework, Chris Knight rejects the common assumption that human culture was a modified extension of primate behavior and argues instead that it was the product of an immense social, sexual, and political revolution initiated by women. Culture became established, says Knight, when evolving human females began to assert collective control over their own sexuality, refusing sex to all males except those who came to them with provisions. Women usually timed their ban on sexual relations with their periods of infertility while they were menstruating, and to the extent that their solidarity drew women together, these periods tended to occur in synchrony. The result was that every month with the onset of menstruation, sexual relations were ruptured in a collective, ritualistic way as the prelude to each successful hunting expedition. This ritual act was the means through which women motivated men not only to hunt but also to concentrate energies on bringing back the meat. Knight shows how this hypothesis sheds light on the roots of such cultural traditions as totemic rituals, incest and menstrual taboos, blood-sacrifice, and hunters' atonement rites. Providing detailed ethnographic documentation, he also explains how Native American, Australian Aboriginal, and other magico-religious myths can be read as derivatives of the same symbolic

This is not the story of a white medicine man. The Apache are an eminently practical people and a nation of survivors. They have native medicine men enough. Phillip gave Jeff Prather a much more profound gift. He taught him the rite of passage to manhood. He intimated that Jeff would someday utilize this precious gift to help our society in crisis. And not without great personal cost and sacrifice. But that is what this book is about. Nobody said it would be easy. Why is Jeff Prather the one to write this book? "Because I owe it. In the Apache culture there is a concept known as shit'ake'e. It means duty or obligation. Because of Philip's training, I am indebted to pass it on and I have a duty to do so. I wrote the book to honor Philip's transcendent teachings and to answer our society's crisis. I lived the answer. I still do. And in the pages of Initiation, I share the answers." Phillip was the greatest modern Diyin, "empowered one" in Apache, who single-handedly reinvigorated the traditional Apache ceremonies which had been banned by federal law until the mid-sixties. Phillip was the son and grandson of chiefs and the ultimate source of knowledge on Apache ceremony. His stature was that of a modern-day Cochise. He had a radio show in the Apache language. He encouraged its use and renewed the old songs. He was visited by rock stars and presidents. He taught, trained and mentored a generation of young Apache ceremonial singers and dancers. And he trained Jeff Prather.
